

CONGRESS WILL MEET SHORTLY

December 5th Is Date Set for Session—Little Chance of General Legislation.

THE RIVER AND HARBOR MEASURE

Only One Bill Outside the Annual Appropriation That Is Likely to Go Through the Coming Session.

Washington, Nov. 23.—Congress re-assembles Dec. 5. Senators and members are beginning to come to town. Perhaps one-fifth of the combined membership of the two houses has arrived. Some of these came early to place their children in school and the others are here to look after departmental business and to prepare for the busy short session.

The approaching session will expire at noon on March 4, just ninety days from its beginning. That gives it thirteen weeks in which to prepare the appropriation bills and to enact such other legislation as it deems necessary. But out of that time is to be taken two weeks for the Christmas holidays.

Sixty-six Working Days.

Eliminating Washington's birthday and Sundays there are but sixty-six working days. With such a short period in which to prepare and enact the great government supply bills congress will have as much as it can do to get them finished. For this reason it is practically impossible that there can be any general legislation.

Several bills already passed by the house and on the senate's calendar may, if serious opposition does not develop, become laws before the representatives are ready to begin sending appropriation items to the upper body.

Philippine Measures.—Among these is the one authorizing the Philippine government to guarantee 5 per cent return on actual investment for railroad construction, provided, however, that the total charge on the insular treasury shall not aggregate more than $1,500,000 annually. This guaranty is regarded as absolutely necessary if the development will be so strong as to seriously menace its possibilities.

In view of the overwhelming decision of the people to retain the Philippines, it is thought wholly unlikely that Democratic opposition to the measure will be so strong as to seriously menace its passage. This may be the only new legislation enacted.

No Pure Food Legislation.

The pure food bill will develop too much debate to have any chance. In its general principles the senate seems to believe it is right, but some of its provisions are regarded as so drastic as to seriously interfere with legitimate business. It would take too much time to whip it into proper shape.

One appropriation bill will be passed that is not one of the annual supply. This is the river and harbor measure, which it is now customary to pass every alternate year. It will be ready to report at an early date. The committee held many hearings at the last session and has all the data necessary for framing the bill. The chief difficulty will be in keeping the measure within reasonable limits. This is particularly necessary, as government expenditures are already sufficiently heavy to exceed the revenues.

HAVE MADE SOME MONEY AT GAMES

Even if Wisconsin Did Finish Far Behind in the Games Played It Made Money.

(Special to The Gazette.)

Madison, Wis., Nov. 23.—Wisconsin made money at football this year, notwithstanding the fact that not one big gridiron contest was won. Financial gains were biggest when the team was most sorely defeated. Incidentally Graduate Manager C. H. Kilpatrick leaves his position with all the debts paid and some $8,000 on hand. Until the big games of the schedule arrived the Wisconsin University Athletic association was deeply in debt. Several large notes were outstanding and the salaries of officials were in arrears. A multitude of bills were outstanding. The Michigan game at Madison netted a little over $5,000 for the Badgers, the Minnesota game at Minneapolis more than doubled that amount and the Thanksgiving day game at Chicago brought several thousands more, although the exact amount has not been announced by the management.

A merry war is in progress for the positions of head football coach, graduate manager of athletics and trainer of the football team. The latest substantial movement is in favor of the return of the former manager, John L. Fisher of Janesville, now an attorney there, or of C. L. Brewer, present manager of the Lansing, Michigan, team.

A persistent sentiment prevails that a salary of $5,000 would attract Coach Yell of Michigan to Wisconsin, notwithstanding the report that he has already contracted to remain at Ann Arbor. E. B. Cochrane, assistant coach this year, has many friends, who assert that the improved showing of Wisconsin in the Chicago game was the result of his efforts in the few days that he had charge of the team. It appears that if the graduate-managerial system be continued he has the best chances of election. The fact that none of the members of this year's team, with the possible exception of Donovan, will be absent next year, makes the Badger prospect for 1905 bright indeed.

PUTTING NEGROES ON FARMS

Booker Washington's Minnesota Colony Rouses Rage of Whites.

Duluth, Minn., Nov. 23.—News has been received here to the effect that an agent of Booker T. Washington is obtaining lands in Blackduck, Beltrami county, Minn., on which to establish a colony of southern negroes. Seven negroes have arrived there already. The agent has options on most of the township, and it is proposed to cut it up into forty-acre farms, one tract for each family. The white settlers of Beltrami county are wild at the idea of negro colonists invading the district and say they will see the scheme is not a success. The country is new and attractive from an agricultural standpoint.

FARMER BOY IMAGINES THAT HE IS A RABBIT

Succumbs to Hypnotic Power of Traveling Professor, Who Fails to Awake Him From Trance.

(Special to The Gazette.)

Duluth, Minn., Nov. 23.—William Burgess, the 11-year-old son of a farmer residing near Fertile, Minn., imagines he is a rabbit and his life is despaired of. He was placed in this condition by a hypnotist, who called himself Prof. Isidore and who gave an entertainment at Kertile.

The lad went on the stage to be hypnotized. He readily succumbed to the hypnotic power and while in that condition the professor told him he was a rabbit. The lad immediately became a rabbit in spirit and the "professor" was unable, after working all night, to bring the boy to his senses. This was ten days ago. The "professor" left for Minneapolis, saying he would return with a nerve specialist, but nothing has been heard of him. The father swears vengeance.

The boy is in a pitiable condition. He makes no sound except to squeak like a rabbit, and is afraid of dogs. Adolph Burgess, the father, has trouble to get the boy into the house or to keep clothing on him.

JANESVILLE WILL BE HEAVY LOSER

Contemplated Change in System of Running Trains on Northwestern Probably Abandoned.

After a great deal of consideration and flurrying by the officials of the Northwestern road in charge of this division of the road, it is thought that the contemplated change in the running of all trains through here will not be made. One plan, as first outlined, was that all crews and engines on trains passing through Janesville be changed here. This would mean that a large number of men with their families would have to move from other cities along the line, where the changes are now made. This city. The object of the move was to get better service and though nothing definite is known by local officials, those in a position to know think that the plan will be dropped and no such change made.

CREW OF TEN SAILORS IS SAVED FROM VESSEL

Old Ship, Waterlogged and Rudderless, Is Drifting a Derelict in the North Pacific.

(Special to The Gazette.)

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 23.—The old barkentine Quickstep, waterlogged, deserted and rudderless, is drifting a derelict somewhere in the Northern seas. Her crew of ten men have been landed in this city by the steamer Homer after undergoing nine days of privation and hardships and losing all their personal belongings. They were taken from the disabled vessel by the Tampico, Captain John Roberts, bound from Seattle and Tacoma to San Pedro. When off Gray's Harbor they were transferred to the steamship Homer.

On Thursday Captain Roberts sighted the Quickstep flying signals of distress. Her sails were in rags and she rolled heavily.

The captain of the barkentine signaled a request for a tow to the nearest port, but Captain Roberts replied that this was not possible, as he did not have a heavy enough crew. He offered to take off the crew before sundown, and this was accepted.

Capt. Johnson of the Quickstep made preparations to take off his crew, but while doing so his foretop sail blew away, and the barkentine was left in a worse condition than ever.

The Tampico lay to for an hour, and as no further attempt was made by the Quickstep to launch a boat, she was sent out from the Tampico in charge of Second Officer Genereux, with four seamen. An attempt was made to get the men off the lee quarter of the disabled vessel, but as the sea was running high this was found to be impossible.

The boat was then brought around and the men loaded themselves into it by sliding down a rope from the end of the ship's bow. They managed to take their dog with them, but left behind every stitch of clothing save the oilskins they wore, and also lost what personal belongings they possessed.

Capt. Johnson says the Quickstep first got in trouble on Nov. 15, and from that date she had been in a waterlogged condition, with the forecastle and aft cabin stove in, the boats smashed and all provisions wet. The steering gear was washed away and the vessel opened fore and aft.

She was owned by S. B. Peterson of this city, and was engaged in the lumber trade along this coast. When picked up she was nine days out from Mukilteo for San Francisco.

The shooting attracted a crowd and the man who shot Holycross held the men at bay while his companions loaded their revolvers. The three desperadoes ran north and succeeded in escaping.

HATFIELD'S ARE THE AGGRESSORS

Turn on Old Friends Who Aided Them During the McCoy Vendetta Recently.

TWO LIVES HAVE BEEN TAKEN

George Hensley, Son-in-Law of "Devil" Anse, Is Slain While Lying in Ambush for the Duty Brothers.

(Special to The Gazette.)

Romoke, Va., Nov. 23.—The notorious Hatfield band, whose members have participated in many feuds, has broken forth again and another reign of terror is promised. This time the Hatfields are at war with a family named Duty, living on Pleasant Creek, in Mingo county. Already two lives, one from each side, have been sacrificed, and it is expected that much blood will be shed before the feud is ended.

Harvey Duty, head of the Duty family, has nine grown sons who are agitating the feud with the Hatfields. The Dutys once were the staunchest friends of the Hatfield gang and aided them in their feud against the McCoy's by giving them shelter and food.

The trouble originated with George Hensley, who married Mary Hatfield, daughter of "Devil" Anse. Hensley lived with "Devil" Anse on Island Creek. Because he had become one of the Hatfield gang he sought to terrorize the Duty boys.

On election day Hensley announced that before sunset he would kill Morgan and Jake Duty. He went in ambush for them a mile from their home, but the Dutys became aware of Hensley's plan and crept up and killed him from behind. "Devil" Anse and "Cap" Hatfield found tracks that led to the Duty home. Stepping suddenly within, they demanded the surrender of the ten Duty boys seized their rifles and made the Hatfields drop their arms and leave.

ROCKEFELLER BUYING TOWN TO GET RID OF MAN

Standard Oil Magnate Seeks to Drive Tavern Keeper From Briggsville by Old Method.

(Special to The Gazette.)

Tarrytown, N. Y., Nov. 23.—For three years John D. Rockefeller has endeavored to buy John J. Molin's property in Briggsville without success. Molin keeps a small tavern on the road to the Standard Oil king's home. It is obnoxious to him and he has time and time again tried to get possession of the land.

He even tried to get Molin's license revoked. So far Molin has beaten him. When Mr. Rockefeller realized he could not oust Molin he made a new move, that of taking Molin's business away from him. That is what many believe is his principal reason for buying up Briggsville.

If Mr. Rockefeller buys the land and there are no people to patronize Molin, why there is nothing for Molin to do but close out at Rockefeller's price. Mr. Rockefeller's recent purchases have had their effect on Molin already, his business dwindling away and those who frequent his place say that he is losing money.

Molin was asked what he thought of Mr. Rockefeller's plan of buying up Briggsville.

"Oh," said he, "I don't know. Mr. Rockefeller is too deep for me."

"No. He will leave me no other yet."

and after he has surrounded my land he will bring me to ruin."

"Will you sell?"

"Yes, I will sell if I get my price. Mr. Rockefeller don't like me or my business. I would like to sell and get money to go into another business."

The residents are awaiting the outcome with much interest.

ROASTS HER BABY AT FURNACE

New Jersey Woman Confesses to Burning Infant Found in Ash Heap.

Paterson, N. J., Nov. 23.—Ida Englehardt, a young German woman who is under arrest, has confessed that she roasted her infant before a furnace fire until it had been fatally burned, according to the local police. She was employed by Moses T. La Forge, who found the infant in an ash barrel. The child was alive, but parts of its body were badly burned and the infant died in a hospital. In her confession the woman says she feared her child's cries would awaken the household while the odor of burning flesh was filling the cellar, so she desisted. Thinking the baby dead, she threw it in the barrel.

Bullion Buyer Is Missing.

London, Nov. 23.—The bullion buyer for the Wood Street Smelting Works, for years operated by the Rothschilds, is said to have absconded, his pecuniaries amounting to more than $1,250,000.

A few nights ago John Daniels, a colleague of the Hatfields, retaliated by murdering Marion Duty, youngest of the brothers, as he was returning from a visit to his sweetheart. All nine of the brothers have sworn to die or to avenge his death.

Hatfield-McCoy Feud.

The Hatfields have led rather an uneventful life since 1897, when Aaron Hatfield married Mary McCoy and brought comparative peace. The members of the band did not let their rifles rust, however, for in July 1899, Elias Hatfield shot and killed H. E. Ellis, a wealthy lumberman, who had assisted in the capture of Johnson Hatfield the previous year. One year later Wayne Hatfield, a son of the jailer in Hatfield county, kept in practice by shooting and killing his cousin, Will Hatfield.

While the Hatfield-McCoy feud lasted—it extended through nearly thirty years—more than forty were killed. Twice that number bear knife and bullet scars. Of the Hatfields, the only desperate members of the band left are "Devil" Anse, Bob and "Cap." Of the McCoy's only one remains, and he is now a resident of Pikeville.

The feud with the McCoy's started over the possession of a razor-back hog. It was an animal of little value and of less beauty and had wandered from the farm of old Randolph McCoy, to be picked up by Floyd Hatfield. The two men first went to law and the witness who lost the case for the Hatfields promptly was killed. Then came the vendetta.

WHAT IRRIGATION SHOWS IN CROPS

GREAT EXHIBIT OF THE ST. LOUIS EXPOSITION.

EXCELLENT PLEA FOR PROJECT

California Exhibit Points Out the Glorious Returns for the Labor.

Of the hundreds of thousands of people who have viewed with amazement the magnificent fruits and grains from the western states, exhibited at the St. Louis fair—far more notable in size, appearance and yield than anything they ever saw in the east—how many of them have realized the cause of this effect? How many of them have thought out the wonderful fact that these products were borne upon lands which a few years ago were useless deserts, but now made fertile by the art of irrigation?

No irrigation exhibits of prominence were in evidence at this World's Fair, as such, yet in everything agricultural they formed a leading part and their withdrawal would have left huge gaps and have taken away the best. Had the products of the dam and the ditch all been labeled.

"Grown by Irrigation" the irrigation exhibit would have been a very big one. And it seems to me that this would have been a good thing. The west is proud of its irrigation; why not thus call attention to its superiority of production?

Fabulous Grain Growths Colorado's exhibit lead easily, though splendid showings were made by other arid states—Oregon, Washington, Montana, Utah, California—but the Centennial state showed 100 different kinds of grasses and 130 different varieties of grain. It had oats 8 feet tall and the timothy heads 6 inches long. It took 240 prizes and 59 gold medals. And its separate fruit exhibit included almost all the products of America except the truly tropical.

Oregon had Mortgage Lifter Wheat 7 feet tall. Think of a wheat field in which an army of 6 foot men would stand concealed. And snow-white onions 6 inches across. And Idaho and Utah had New Mexico, and all the west forth a dazzling display of irrigated apples and plums, peaches and grapes of color, size and beauty which it would take a book to describe.

But ahead of all the west in the extent and variety of her exhibit stood California—California, that vast strip of golden land reaching from Oregon to Mexico and including the vegetable wealth of the tropics.

The Products of the Great Empire. Fruit is the main stay of the Golden State and $250,000 is represented in her showings in St. Louis. The great Palace of Agriculture is the largest building of the Exposition, covering 16 acres and it seemed as though I would never get outside of the domain of the California exhibit.

Single counties made showings creditable for a state. Such things caught the eye as a life size elephant of English walnuts, the State Capital building constructed in almonds, the famous Lick Observatory done in dried fruits and big enough to contain several families. The wine exhibit took the Grand Prize above all foreign competitors. The most luscious and enormous pears, peaches, oranges, lemons, grape fruit, plums, cherries and all kinds of huge vegetables were stacked in rich profusion, along side of great branches and clusters of fruits of all kinds showing how things can grow under irrigation.

The grape bunches of California are almost of the brilliant kind requiring two men to carry a single bunch. No man can carry the product of a single vine.

Government Irrigation Dam Practical methods of irrigation were demonstrated at the Government building by a model of the Salt River Valley in Arizona, showing the great government dam now under construction in the mountains and the system of ditches and laterals by which the water is distributed into the farms and orchards below, real water was running through these ditches. This great work of Uncle Sam's in Arizona is progressing rapidly. I was told by Engineer Savage whom I recently met in Montana. A cement mill to make 200,000 barrels of cement needed in the masonry, is completed, a $100,000 mountain road to convey the dam material from Phoenix is finished and most remarkable, the river itself has been carried through tunnels around the dam site, and is furnishing some 1,000 electric horse power with which to build the dam. This is to be used to construct the plant works and thus the river will build its own dam and form a reservoir the greatest in the United States.

Giant Pumping Machinery Of all sizes and classes were the BINGHAMTON MAN IN LUCK.

"Jones of Binghamton" was in town last night, not he "who pays the freight," but John C. Jones, as he is registered at the Grand Hotel.

For a few hours Jones was sad and despondent, and was not afraid to tell his troubles. Later in the day he was the happiest stranger within our gates, when he came up to the clerk of the Grand Hotel and while perched, "I found you; got 'em down at Smith's Drug Co. Now I can eat a good dinner and look forward to smoking a Wadsworth Bros. 'Chico' afterwards. The Smith Drug Co. say they have not had the 'Chico's' in stock very long, but they are already making a lot of friends.

"Strange how homesick it makes a man to lean over a cigar case and not see a brand that he has ever heard of before. That was the way I felt all day, but when I went into Smith's pharmacy and saw my old friend, the Wadsworth Bros. 'Chico's.' I knew there was a good smoke coming to your truly. It only costs 5 cents, but there is no 10 cent cigar that is so good and I have smoked most of them."

GERMAN AMBASSADOR BARON SPECK VON STERNBERG.

The German ambassador at Washington has proved very acceptable to the American people and, in marked contrast to his predecessor, seems to have a strong insight into American feeling and prejudices.

Irrigation pumps exhibited in the farm implement department of the St. Louis Fair, but more striking than these were the windmills. These busy machines rearing their tall heads above the surrounding buildings and whirling gaily in the breeze formed a striking example of man's ingenuity in harnessing the elements. The highest of these, built by one of the largest windmill manufacturers, spread its galvanized steel wings 120 feet in the air and with a moderate wind pumped 40,000 gallons an hour. The water gushes up like a fine artesian well and supplies a ditch to irrigate a good sized farm.

IRRIGATION'S FUTURE

What will be the next irrigation exhibit at a World's Fair? Some say that for many years to come, this is the last of the big international exhibitions. If this be so, and it should be 15 or 20 years before another great fair, when one does come, its irrigation exhibit is likely to overshadow everything else in agriculture. The present is at the beginning of great things. The government has undertaken the work of national reclamation of the desert and is pushing the work rapidly. Vast engineering works, huge dams and canals are being constructed in the western states and territories and as the work proceeds the people will realize its wisdom and worth and it will be pushed forward still faster. As Engineer Savage remarked "It is an entrancing work, is it not; this creating of homes for men out of desert wastes?"

And so twenty years from now, if the course of wisdom is pursued and the government irrigation work continues along right lines and is not pure of politics and graft, we may see a west with nearly double its present population and the splendid products of American irrigation reaching to every nook and corner of the world.

JANSVILLE GIRL WRITES OF FETE

TELLS OF LONG BEACH, CALIFORNIA, CELEBRATION.

HOW THE CELEBRATION CAME

What Was Done in the Opening of the New Pier for Public Use.

Long Beach, Cal.—Hundreds of flags waving proudly from their lofty positions, buildings draped in national colors, and streets, an archway of palms and bunting told in their language there was to be a grand celebration. This was the christening of the new pier of Long Beach on Nov. 12th, 1904.

Surely Long Beach did its best and has a right to be proud and boastful for this double-decked pier glistening with its fresh coat of paint, and draped in the national colors, palms and callas presented a picture any town might be proud of.

Out upon the waters the waves rocked the launches and yachts decorated in fitting attire. Two large government vessels, the McCulloch and Manning, were anchored out at distance. The breakers coming in seemed to do their best in part at celebrating.

The exercises commenced at 10 a. m. and lasted throughout day and evening. There were two street parades (morning and evening), addresses by men of note and prominent citizens of Long Beach, the presentation of the magic key of the pier to Governor Pardee of California by Miss Wilson, chosen as queen of the sea, the unlocking of the pier by the governor, barbecue, dancing, launch and yacht races, naval sham battles and other minor amusements too numerous to mention.

The parade marching down the palm-arched streets was a pretty spectacle. First came the mounted police, grand marshal and assistants, Knights of Pythias, several marching clubs, Catalina band and the speakers of the day. After this came the queen of the sea clad in a nice green garment covered with silver-spangled net. Her crown was of inland shell, the work of one of Rock county's boys—Mr. W. S. Scott.

Following the queen's float was the fire department and Long Beach Milling Co. and then the Indian band. The speaking took place in Ocean park. Among the speakers were Gov. Pardee, Senator Perkins, ex-Speaker Henderson and Congressman McLachlan. The queen in her pleasing way presented the governor with the magic key. The parade then formed again and marched to the pier where the governor unlocked the gates decked with anchors and fishing nets. At the opening of the gates whistles blew, cannon boomed, people cheered and hands played. Throngs of people made their way along the upper deck of the pier to the end, then descending to the lower pier partook of the barbecue, bread, meat, and coffee were served to thousands. Twenty-three cattle were slaughtered for this great event. After this came the yacht and launch races.

In the evening the brilliant illumination was grand. The boats out at sea were trimmed with bunting and electric lights. The pavilion was crowded with merry dancers and the bathhouse surely never could have looked prettier as it was a perfect palace of light, being lighted with one thousand eight hundred electric lights. Fireworks of all kinds were sent from the pier, shore and boats. Far out upon the water was a sham battle. Long Beach can feel that it has had one great day in its history.

It is a thriving little town and some day no doubt will be a very large city as it is one of the four harbors of California, the others being San Diego, San Francisco and Santa Barbara.

This pier contains 40,000 feet of piling, 300 cars gravel, 4,000 pounds cement, 1,500,000 feet of lumber. It extends 18,000 feet out into the water. It is composed of two parts, the upper or promenade deck, and extension of the main street of Long Beach called Pine avenue, and the lower deck used for teaming and fishing. From the pier are caught cod, mackerel and sea-bass. About one-third of the way out is the pavilion. On the first floor are tables for picnickers to Long Beach. On the upper floor free hand concerts are held every afternoon and evening and dances every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evening. West of the pier is the bath-house. It was built by the Seaside Water company at a cost of over $100,000. It is the Grecian style of architecture. It is 22 feet wide and 220 feet long. It contains about 500 dressing rooms and a ladies' plunge. In the main building is one of the largest plunges in America measuring 60x120 feet. A gallery above is for spectators.

Outside on the sands is a playground for children with lawn-swing, see-saws and nearly everything to delight a child.

Long Beach rightly deserves its name, as it is one long expanse of sand stretching from Alhambra to San Pedro. Surf-bathing may be enjoyed the year round. The sand is left hard and compact by the tide. A ride along the margin of the ocean with now and then a breaker dashing upon the shore, reminds one of the picture on the calendar given by the Merchants & Mechanics bank of Jansville. "When the Flowing Sea Comes In."

The ocean has a charm upon one. One learns to love it more and more. The ceaseless roar, the ever changing colors, and the breakers starting far out at sea and rolling toward the shore break upon the sand as great white drifts of foam bringing with them the beautiful shells. The city of Long Beach is situated in the center of a horse-shoe bay with the ocean at the south, the picturesque mountains including Mt. Wilson, San Gabriel, Mt. Lowe and Old Baldy and the Palos Verdes hills to the west. Far out upon the ocean rise the mountains of Santa Catalina.

To get a beautiful view of the city one ought to go to the top of Signal hill or Knoll park. At sunset when the sun is sending its last rays across the Palos Verdes hills to the distant mountains at the north, gliding its way across the city and changing the mountains covered with snow to mountains of sparkling beauty.

How can I describe on paper or otherwise the charms of this country? The streets are shaded by the overhanging pepper-trees with their bright berries and the palms with their fan shaped leaves. The flowers! oh, the flowers! geraniums, callas, carnations, heliotropes, salix, roses, lily and many others are grown to the greatest profusion. Flowers on both sides of the walk. I often wonder how long such flowers would remain in Jansville. Below you are the fields and pastures, now dead but soon to revive with the welcome rains, the old remains of the Mexican adobe houses, salt marshes, peat lands, lemon and orange orchards, boats plying the ocean, and the distant towns of San Pedro, Wilmington, Fullerton and Los Angeles.

Now I will tell of the people who came to Long Beach and the surrounding towns from Jansville nearly two months ago. Mr. Dodge and sons are running a paint shop. Mrs. Carmen and son have rooms on ocean front. Mr. Joel Proctor has purchased a beautiful home across from Knoll park. Mrs. Alice Inman is in Santa Anna and Mr. and Mrs. Barlow are in Los Angeles. Mr. Davis is opening the Birchwood livery. Mr. Wilcox is building a lovely home on American avenue. Mr. Gray resides on Cedar avenue and enjoys his fishing. Mr. Stannard, formerly of Milton, is in the drug business. It seems hard to realize that back in Jansville coal fires are burning while here we are trying to find a coal place during the day.

GEORGE TALMAGE OF SHARON KILLED NORTH OF HARVARD

By a Northbound Train on the Madison Division Friday Afternoon.

While attempting to drive over the first crossing north of Harvard with five horses secured at a sale in that town, George Talmage of Sharon met instant death late Friday afternoon. The rig was struck by a northbound Jansville train on the Madison division of the North-Western at what is known as the Lawrence crossing, and the five horses met the same fate as their owner. The crossing is in a deep cut and is supposed to be guarded with an electric bell to give warning of the approach of trains. Whether or not the bell failed to work is not known. Mr. Talmage was thirty years of age. He is survived by a wife and four small children.

Coming Attractions.

Mme. Mantell, Coming.
The famous Italian Prima donna at the head of her own company.
An unusual and most interesting musical "event" is in store for all lovers of high class music in this city on Tuesday evening. The announcement is made that arrangements have been closed with J. Saunders Gordon, the widely known operatic manager of New York, for an engagement here of the newly organized Mantell Opera company, headed by Mme. Mantell, who for seven years was a principal and one of the foremost favorites of the Grand Grand Opera company at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York. Among the other principals of Mr. Gordon's new organization are Sig. Archibbi Alberti, the famous baritone, who was also a former member of the Grand company; Mme. Helene Noldi, the dramatic soprano and Walter H. Wheatley, tenor.

The repertoire of the company will include the musical "Gems" from Acta II and IV of "Carmen"; the garden and prison scenes from "Faust" and the Garden, Prison and Tower scenes from "Il Trovatore." Each act and scene is provided with special scenery and gorgeously costumed. Sig.
Gaetano Merola, the well known musical director has been engaged to conduct the orchestra, which will be largely augmented for the occasion.

The frank avowal of the author of Broadhurst & Curdy's well-known and successful farcical melange,
"Rudolph & Adolph," which will be seen at the Myers Grand Opera house this week that it "is not an attempt to elevate the stage but merely an effort to drive away the blues" does much to prepare the mind of the local theatre-goer. The blues are a common nuisance and whether at election time or on the other occasion, the ones who do it are deserving of the highest public approval. "Rudolph & Adolph" have continued in their quaint humorous and delightful way to do this for several seasons and hence are old favorites in the amusement field. The play is simple in plot and unfolding. No matter what the tariff issue may involve, it has nothing to do with the amount of laughter and shuffling feet in the Broadhurst & Curdy's new musical mel-ange, "Rudolph & Adolph" that will be seen at the Myers Grand shortly.

Commencing with this evening the Kennedy Stock Co. will open a four days engagement at the Myers Opera House, and during their stay this popular company will present a repertoire of the highest class of plays, including the phenomenal success, the Midnight Express, which will hold the boards this ov-enning next. The company carries complete scenic embellishments for every play and in detail. Specialties are introduced between each act of every play and such well known vaudevilleans as the Flamingo Sisters, Dyer and Corbet, Ben Lewis, the Holloway comedian, John J. Kennedy, and Little Dot are found in this company's roster.

We venture the assertion that gas is a good thing in its place, but if it has been in its place the last two nights—dark as Erebus—our citizens have failed to see it. If it isn't good for lighting the streets on such inky nights as the last two, it isn't good for anything. Who will "see to it?" Someone ought to, as we observed an alderman at church last evening with a lantern.

HON. J. J. CORNWALL
The defeated candidate for the West Virginia governorship will continue to practice law at Wheeling. Personally Mr. Cornwall is very popular, as is shown by his polling a larger vote than Parker and David in the latter's home state.

Probably showers tonight and Tuesday; rising temperature tonight.

If your store proposition is one that will appeal to people of practical business sense it will pay you to tell about it in the advertising columns of this paper. Is it not better to keep the sixty thousand people posted about your store than to depend upon the accidental calls of a few hundred customers?

A GOOD QUITTER

The people admire a good quitter as well as a good fighter, and the fact is generally recognized that the fight which has been going on in the ranks of the republican party during the past four years in Wisconsin, is over for the present at least.

The state administration was endorsed by a majority of over 50,000 and whatever may be the complexion of this majority, it represents the citizenship of the state. The vote for President Roosevelt and the majority of 153,000 received by the national ticket shows that the 100,000 republicans who did not vote for the governor, were loyal to the party and its principles.

These men are also citizens of the state, and they represent in large degree its most important interests. They are republicans of the old school and when they retire from the party, the party will cease to exist.

Governor La Follette is the governor of all the people. His endorsement is large enough to warrant the belief that the reform measures advocated are popular with a majority of the voters, and it remains for the man who opposed him to submit gracefully to the will of the majority.

It is safe to assume that the good judgment of the people will regulate innovations and hold them in check if found to be harmful. Peace, at the present time, is desirable. The republican party has won a signal victory and the state shares in this victory. The future will take care of itself so far as the state is concerned, and the scars of conflict will disappear if the vanquished demonstrate ability to be good quitters as well as good fighters.

BRYANS' PLEA.

The longer William Jennings Bryan studies out the complicated disease which killed the Democratic party last November 8th, the more he theorizes on the great blessing which swept over the country. Mr. Bryan is hard to convince that the management of the campaign in the east by eastern managers did not kill the celebrated donkey of pen and verse. In his last edition of the "Commoner" he makes the following plea to all true democrats regardless of condition of servitude or color.

A democrat of prominence in the nation who would openly and earnestly opposed the ticket in 1896 writes as follows:

"I have read your article on the election and I believe you are nearly right. If there is a lesson to be drawn from this election it is that the people want something radical and something they can rely upon. There is no chance for a conservative democratic party. We have forgotten the traditions of Jefferson and Jackson—they were positive and pushing, we are slow and apologetic. This country has got to have a better system of taxation or there will be trouble—and taxation to my mind includes the tariff question as well as an income tax, which I am heartily in favor of. We must not give up, either, the question of the Philippines. If something is not done there the country is lost."

This is a sample of the letters that have been received since the election. The writer of the above letter is now convinced that the democratic party can not hope to win the confidence of the masses unless it goes forward and takes up the questions in which the people are interested.

At St. Louis every member of the resolutions committee except one, expressed himself in favor of the income tax, but it was omitted from the platform because those who controlled the convention did not want to offend the moneyed element. It was pointed out in the committee by those who favored the tax that even upon the low plane of expediency the party could not afford to ignore the injustice that our present tax systems bring to the masses.

The income of tax is a just tax. If the rank and file of the people were as alert to protect their interests as the corporations are to protect their interests, the sentiment in favor of the income tax would be overwhelming, but enough understand the situation to make it folly for the democratic party to dodge or evade the issue.

The late campaign lacked life and enthusiasm, and these were lacking because the voters did not feel that there was as much difference as there ought to be between the republican and democratic parties.

The democratic party can not hope to be popular with organized wealth unless it is willing to surrender itself completely to the dictation of organized wealth, and even then it could not hope to win the monopolists away from the republican party. If, however, the democratic party will convince the masses that it is going to stand for their interests, guard their rights and promote their welfare it can become a powerful and effective influence in politics.

The fact that many who opposed the party in 1896 now realize the necessity for an active and progressive democracy, is one of the crumbs of comfort to be gathered from the lamentable defeat.

THE POWER OF THE PRESS.

The London Spectator has a very interesting article on the subject of the press of London, the occasion for which is the transfer of the London Standard to Mr. C. A. Pearson, a partisan paper, usually a warm supporter of the Tory Party, it was always scrupulously honest, and about as impartial as a partisan paper could be. The Spectator points out that the sale of the Standard increases what it calls "that tendency to decay in the representative character of London journalism, which experienced observers have marked for some years with ever increasing regret." It points out that the Times which was once a very great newspaper, has become almost as a Chamberlain organ. The Telegraph and the Morning Post are on the same side. The Daily News represents the extreme school of Nonconformist radicalism, while the Daily Chronicle is now, since its reduction in price, written for the "man in the street."

The Spectator, as a result of the changes that have taken place, notices a perceptible decline in the influence of the press. It holds that "while educationally greatly increased the desire to read newspapers, it greatly diminishes the readiness to take newspaper opinion for gospel."

Of course, this country provides a shining example of a popular press without influence. In the last twenty years the London press has gradually assumed the characteristics similar to those distinguishing our newspapers. Everybody reads newspapers and no doubt everyone is influenced by what he reads. In the papers, but is the news of fact rather than the news of thought that influences him. In the election of 1903 practically every newspaper of prominence in New York city opposed the Tammany candidate for mayor, but he was elected by a huge majority. In the election of 1904 most of the papers in New York city opposed President Roosevelt, but he cut down the Democratic majority in very notable fashion. There was a time in England as the Spectator points out, when John Deane, editor of the Times, "was really the strongest man in England, with influence which made his journal, on occasion, a counterpoise to the cabinet," but no one has since held the position. No one has ever held in this country a position anything like it.

One reason why the power of the press is on the wane in England, and why it is almost nil in this country, is that the public has not confidence that the aims of the newspaper press are high. It has come to regard newspapers as, in the first place, servants of the truth. Indeed, it has had good reason to doubt that service of the truth is a purpose at all so far as many papers are concerned. A newspaper must live. It cannot serve the truth without circulation, and without advertising to partly pay for that circulation. In that sense of the word a newspaper must be a self-supporting commercial institution, but that is not its goal. Its goal is the service of truth—"the truth in its proper use." If it cannot live without being false to the truth, it has no right to live, and were better dead. If it cannot find a living in the service of truth, it is better for everyone that it should not exist. The trouble with newspapers, and the reason why the power of the press is no negligible a quantity in this country, is that by far the greater number of newspapers mistake the means for the end, or deliberately sacrifice the end for the means. Wherever there is a newspaper that does not do this, that is faithful in the service of truth, there will be found a newspaper with real influence and power—and, furthermore, it will usually be found to be prosperous.

That Italian count who proposed to wed an American heiress in return for a cash payment of $70,000 and was offered only $50,000 should close the deal at once. Latest quotations show that counts, fair to middling and in good condition, are falling in price rapidly in this country.

There is a rumor abroad that Secretary Shaw is much annoyed at the poor messenger services in Washington, not being able to see why the boy who left the white house bearing an urgent invitation for him to remain in the cabinet, should take so long to get around to the treasury department.

Some of the college football managers seem to feel that their love of the sport is too deep and sincere to permit them to renounce the gate receipts from Thanksgiving day games.

Inventors of flying machines should observe that the homing pigeons in the world's fair contest made 450 miles without a puncture or the breaking of a single valve.

If "Uncle Sam" is as preserving in his efforts to "speak softly" as he has been in his efforts to acquire a "big stick" he ought to have no trouble in keeping the peace.

Music may be a cure for nervous troubles, but in the case of compositions like "Hawatha" and "Bedella" the opinion will prevail that the remedy is worse than the disease.

There is nothing in the detectives' operations in the case of "Mr. Dove" that is calculated to make the reputation of Sherlock Holmes look faded and shopworn.

Fortunately the people of Port Arthur do not get their own news by way of Chefoo and thus are able to live in happy ignorance of the horrors of their situation.

Some observers of Secretary Shaw's new plan will think that adding anything in the nature of a "drawback" to the present tariff system is a port of supererogation.

Whether it is the completion of a subway or the trial of Nan Patterson that furnishes the sensation is all one to those excitement-loving New Yorkers.

By all odds the best fests of aerial navigation at St. Louis have been performed by the competitors in the homing pigeon contest.

Secretary Shaw has succeeded in evolving a scheme of tariff revision based strictly and exclusively on the standing pat principle.

Port Arthur had a big fire the other day, which have furnished some excitement and a relief from the monotony of the daily band concert.

Possibly the Baltic fleet will be interested in learning that Japan has just received some new submarine boats.

Life will be dull for the football players, now that they have nothing to do but get their lessons.

Japan insists that the sailing of the Baltic fleet is a bluff. Still, Togo may yet have occasion to call it.

In Gen. Nog's army the real heroes now are the men behind the spades and the wheelbarrows.

Now you have just one month in which to forget to do your Christmas shopping early.

Doxie's sympathies are with the Japanese, yet the Russians have more whiskers.

Japanese shells start fire in Port Arthur, but nothing in the kitchen stores.

PRESS COMMENT.

Hudson Star-Times: A boy read in the paper the other day: "If you want to succeed, go beyond the edge." He did so and is now skating in Paradise.

Waupaca Post: It would be a fitting close to an active career, during which he has done much for Wisconsin, if Judge Webb should be elevated to the senate.

Oshkosh Northwestern: Let's see, has the badger football team managed to win just one little game this season?

Milwaukee News: It's singular that none of our esteemed contemporaries as yet have been moved to suggest that the slump in the price of whisky may be due to the lessened number of Democrats.

Oshkosh Times: A spear of grass which grows in great profusion in South Africa, has been found available for paper making, and the British manufacturers are contemplating the erection of mills on the ground. This will be a new industry for South Africa.

Milwaukee Free Press: The pity of the football season is that Michigan—being the undoubtedly big western team—could not try it out with Yale or Columbia. There is an honest belief throughout the east that any one of the big eleven could easily average a Wolverine apiece for their Thanksgiving dinner.

La Crosse Leader-Press: The Russian Baltic fleet, having now reached the Suez canal, cannot turn back without making the nation a laughing stock. It must go on to Port Arthur and many are beginning to wonder what will happen to it when it gets there.

Hudson Star-Times: The Janesville Gazette thinks the state made a great mistake in permitting County Boards to appropriate money in any sum to keep private institutions to place dependent children in homes. It contends the commonwealth has appliances for such work which far surpasses the individual endeavor.

Milwaukee Herald: Local insurance men do not fully agree with the eastern report that total abstainers live 50 per cent longer than those who drink, and that an especially low rate should be prepared for risks of that class. 20 per cent is nearer the mark according to local ideas and it is claimed that it would be impossible to regulate this kind of business, for one who might be a total abstainer today might be a drinking man tomorrow.

Milton Journal: I notice in your issue of Nov. 17 that Prof. Shaw's peck of Tomatoes weighed six lbs. and five ounces. The statistics of the state give sixty pounds to the bushel and one peck therefore should weigh fifteen pounds. Election is over, would it not be better to get nearer the truth in your statements? Perhaps I did not exactly take your meaning. You may have meant a hen peck. Mr. Hull's conclusions are logical but the potatoes mentioned filled a peck measure despite their weight.

POLICE SEEK TO FIND CLUES HERE

CHICAGO POLICE WANT INFORMATION AS TO DELAVAN.

THINK HE MURDERED BATE

Believe Dove and Man Convicted Here of Crime Are the Same Person.

Chicago police investigating the murder of Chantier late have now returned to the theory that the murder was committed by George Hugg, who had posed under the alias of "Dr. Dove" while under arrest in Chicago recently. Telegrams received this morning asking information regarding any possible connection Hugg may have had with Delavan, arrested here in 1901 and sent to state prison, show the Chicago police are at sea on the case and are seeking for any clue possible.

Ask Information.

Telegrams and telephone messages point to the fact that the police are confident that Hugg, Delavan, Vanderbilt and Dove are one and the same. Dove is thought to have weighed in the neighborhood of 100 pounds and to have been five feet four inches tall. This is the height, weight and weight of Hugg, or Delavan, or Vanderbilt, his three different aliases. Chicago police claim that they have positive proof that Hugg and Delavan are the same, having the measurements of the state prison for Delavan and the height measurements for Hugg.

Seek Every Clue.

That the Chicago police are seeking every clue possible is evidenced by the fact that they are now trying to trace a south side Chicago woman who is said to have loaned Hugg eight hundred dollars, on the plea he was a medical student and needed this to complete his education and secure his instruments. This claim would have been grounds for the murder. This is the conclusion that providing Bate knew this woman and then learned his passenger was Hugg and demanded the return of the money. He turned back to Chicago and Hugg to save himself from arrest shot him.

WILL THE COUNCIL NAME A MARSHAL?

At the Regular Meeting This Evening? Question of All-Ab. sorbing Interest.

Of all matters which may come before the city council for action this evening, the election of a successor to the late City Marshal John W. Hogan will be of chief interest to the people. It is likely that the first ballot will show too few votes for any one candidate to elect and succeed. Ballots may show the same phenomenon. In that case the election may again be postponed. The candidate for any one man to insure his election, William Appleby, was in the city early this morning looking over his fence and Acting Chief Brown and Alderman Comstock were likewise busy today. In addition to this matter the question of granting a saloon license to W. C. English and Bert Van Hunter, new proprietors of the Hotel Cornueau, will come up for a decision.

CUT WAS ACCEPTED BY THE EMPLOYEES

Arbitration Was Not Resorted to in Dispute Between Management and Employees of Marzluft Factory

There will be no work for the arbitration committee appointed to settle the dispute between the employees and the management of the Marzluft shoe factory. A shop meeting was held Friday noon and the employees decided to accept the cut. Sworn statements of price lists in other shops were used by both sides. The union men claim that though the price lists were lower than three cents per pair on the lasting machines in some shops, yet the conditions of labor were different. The grade of shoes turned out at the Marzluft factory is finer than in the majority of shops and more time has to be spent on each pair than if the shoes were of lower grade. Portions of the machine have to be changed for every different size and shape and for left and right, all of which takes time. The men hold that in most shops and those where two and two and a quarter cents per pair are paid, the machine has to be changed only a few times a day, while in the Marzluft factory the shoes come in small lots and many times more changes have to be made.

BELOIT JUSTICE IS VERY LENIENT

One Hundred and Three Fines Imposed in Police Court, Bringing in Revenue of Only $257.

Since last January there have been 103 fines imposed by Police Justice J. R. Booth of Beloit and the list of those in the office of the county treasurer shows in many instances, the fine for a drunk, if he was a man, appears in many cases to have been about one dollar, while women paid $2. In one instance a man is fined $2 for drunkenness and upon appearing before the court a second time, two days later, receives $2 again. There are a few big fines, such as $15 for selling liquor on Sunday, $40 for selling liquor as a pharmacist and not recording it, and $25 for selling adulterated milk. Justice Booth took in $257 in fines. All but two per cent of this amount ($5.14) goes to the county, while the county has to pay the justice $243.29 for his fee. Deduct $5.14 and there is left $238.25 as the net cost to the county of maintaining the police justice's office at the line city. There is a possibility that if the fines had been larger there would have been fewer of them, and less fees in consequence.

Mrs. Mantell's Bill: The "bill" for Mrs. Mantell, the noted Italian prima donna, who appears with the Mantell Operatic company at Myers theatre Tuesday night, has been definitely decided upon by Managers Gordon and Myers. As it includes all the musical "gems" of two most popular operas, sung entirely in English by some of the greatest artists in the country, it should prove exceptionally attractive to music-lovers of Janesville. The opening half of the evening's program will consist of a complete prison scenes and acts from Gounod's "Faust," in which Mrs. Mantell's leading supporting artists will appear: Mrs. Helene Nold, the handsome dramatic soprano, as Marguerite, and Signor Arrilli Alberti, the noted baritone (late of the Metropolitan opera-house), as Mephisto; with the remaining leading roles capably cast. The last half of the night's performance will consist of the second and fourth acts complete of Bizet's masterpiece, "Carmen," in which Mrs. Mantell has achieved fame in all parts of the world. Sign. Alberti appears in this opera as the dashing torador, Escamillo, a role in which he created a veritable sensation during his engagement at the Metropolitan in New York. All these acts and scenes are given with beautiful costumes and special scenery. Sign. Gaetano Merola, the noted conductor, will direct in both operas. The sale of seats indicates an unusual interest among Janesville opera-lovers in the coming of the eminent Italian singer and her associates.

Dr. St. John Improving: The many friends of Dr. J. W. St. John will be glad to learn that he is slowly improving and sits up most of the time nowadays. His recovery was delayed by stomach trouble which has, through lack of proper nourishment, kept him very weak.

Bought New Horse: A new road horse for the south side fire station, weighing 1,275 pounds and costing $355, has been secured. The new station will be opened for business on January 1. It will have one horse wagon and a crew of three men.

King's Messengers: The Misses Gladys Nicholson and Edna Wright will entertain the King's Messengers of the Presbyterian church tonight at the home of the former, 157 Chatham street.

Thumb Badly Cut: This morning while at work in the cutting room of the Marzluft shoe factory, Tony Benkbert received a deep cut in his left thumb. The pattern, which he was using, slipped and allowed the knife to enter the member and cut the flesh to the bone. Dr. Merritt dressed the wound and found there to be no danger of losing the digit or of blood poisoning.

Horse Arrested: Saturday night A. Schaller, son of George Schaller, found a horse wandering around on Racine street and took it to the city hall where Officer Fanning took the animal into keeping. A man by the name of Brown called Sunday morning at aivery stable for the horse, which had broken away from a hitching post on North Main street.

Was Under Age: A marriage license was issued today to Rudolph Dohs and Augusta Burrow, both of the town of Rock. The prospective groom is under age and it was necessary to secure the consent of his parents.

Monroe Exchange: Seven men comprising a crew of the Wisconsin Telephone Co. are engaged in the work of installing the new exchange at Monroe, brought about by the combination with the Independent Electric there. Ed Barron is superintending the switchboard work and James Fraser has charge of the construction.

Bill Raiser Caught: The man who was raising one dollar bills to tens and against whom the government of the United States warned as people was caught at Aurora, Illinois, by the city police. He was taken in charge by secret service men and will await trial in Chicago.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Measuring Lances.

When Randolph Morris retired in favor of his son he transferred no small burden of responsibility to the shoulders of the latter. Arthur Morris inherited his father's money and his ambitions, but not his masterly grasp of affairs. Arthur Morris had little sympathy with that fine old conservatism which stops short of direct participation in corruption. He believed, as has been stated, that every man has his price, and was willing to pay it, provided it promised returns.

Ambitious to pose as a Wall Street leader, Arthur Morris had assumed an enormous load of stocks, and the success of his ventures had given him the following which ever attended the leader in a rising market. In addition to this speculative risk, Morris had secured several valuable franchises, and was confidently in expectation of others at the hands of the city officials.

It will be sufficiently accurate to designate the Morris enterprise by the name of "The Cosmopolitan Improvement Company," and to state that its assets consisted in its acquired and prospective franchises. While purporting to afford relief from existing monopolies, it was in fact nothing more nor less than a well-planned attempt to acquire competitors. In the parlance of finance it was a "sand-bar."

Arthur Morris took up the work so suspiciously begun by his father—the wrecking of the L. & O. railroad company. In this campaign, General Carden and many others had lost their fortunes. Morris held control of the bonds, and looked forward to the day when the stock would be wiped out and this splendid property fall into his hands. It was an open secret in railway circles that the L. & O. would then be absorbed by one of the two powerful companies which intersected its lines.

John Burt detected a flaw in this conspiracy. He set aside three battalions of a million dollars each, and held them in reserve against the entrenched wealth in the Morris vaults. Then he again scanned the field of action, and with unerring judgment placed his finger on the weakest point in the Morris defenses. The Cosmopolitan Improvement Company was a rampart on paper. John Burt proposed to enfilade it. The highest legal authority assured him that the franchises already granted to the Cosmopolitan were invalid.

As the crisis in his affairs deepened, John Burt took a more direct charge of affairs. The trusted employees of James Blake & Company were informed that "John Burt" was a silent partner, who represented large California interests, and that his orders must be followed without question.

In response to James Blake's message, Alderman Samuel Rounds called and was conducted to the private office of the famous operator. Blake had anticipated with zest the meeting between John Burt and Sam Rounds. It had been contemplated for several weeks, but now that the hour was at hand, he took little interest in it. He found it difficult to respond to Sam's hearty greetings, and terminated the interview as soon as possible.

"Heon are ye, Jim; heon are ye!" exclaimed Sam, as he greeted Blake in his luxurious office. "Don't it beat time, as uncle Toby Haynes used say, that you an' I are here in New York, an' you are rich, an' I am—well, say fair to middlin'." There were only three of us young fellows 'round Rocky Woods; you an' John Burt an' me. Do you suppose we'll ever hear from John Burt, Jim? I've allers said he'd turn up on top, some day or nother."

"Would you like to hear from him?" asked Blake, without raising his eyes.

"Would I? D'ye know anything about him, Jim? Dew ye really?"

"There's a man in the next room who knows a lot about him," replied Blake. "Come and meet him."

Blake opened John Burt's door and stood in the way as Sam entered. John was seated at his desk and did not turn his head or make a move when Blake said:

"A-derman Rounds wishes to speak to you."

Blake stepped outside and closed the door. John deliberately blotted an unfinished letter, rose and advanced to meet Sam, who stood awkwardly by the door, hat in hand.

"I am glad to see you, Alderman Rounds," he said, extending his hand. "I have heard of you and wish the pleasure of your acquaintance. Pray be seated, Alderman."

The sharp blue eyes of the visitor were fixed on the speaker, and only for an instant was he in doubt.

"I know ye, John! God bless ye, John! Heon are ye, John Burt! I'm plumb tickled ter death ter see ye! Well, well, well!"

His honest eyes glistened as he threw his hat to the floor and grasped John's hands with a grip which have made the average man wince.

"And I'm glad to see you, Sam! It seems like coming back to life to meet you. Sit down and tell me all about yourself and Rocky Woods."

"The last time I saw ye, John," he said, "was under them maple trees in front of the Bishop house. I reckon you ain't forgot that night. You galloped away in the dark on your horse an' I ain't seen ye since. Now you begin at the place like in them stories which run in the Fireside Companion where it says 'to be continued in our next,' and keep right on up to the present time."

John laughed, and gave Sam a hurried sketch of his career. He told of his voyage around Cape Horn, his arrival in San Francisco, the search for the mine described by the dying sailor, his meeting with Jim Blake, the discovery of the gold mine, his association with John Hawkins and the incidents which led to the formation of the firm of James Blake & Company. John said nothing to lead Sam to think that Blake was a representative, but the shrewd Yankee guessed the truth.

"I swan, John, this is low good tew be true!" he gasped, shaking hands again. "You ain't told me half the truth, an' ye ain't have tew. I can guess the rest. You're James Blake & Company. You're the man who's taught these Wall Street chaps a lesson! I'm proud of ye, John! Didn't I allers say somethin' like this would happen? An' you can't have too much good fortune to suit me, John. I ain't want a thing from ye. I just like tew see ye win, because—well, because ye order win."

"Thank you, Sam."

"Don't it beat thunder how things turn out?" observed Sam. "I saw Jim when he was down tew Rocky Woods a few months ago, an' when he told me that he was the Jim Blake, you could a' knocked me down with a willow switch. I said tew myself then, that had it been John Burt I wouldn't been surprised. An' now, by thunder, it was John Burt who did it after all. But how about Jim Blake, John? If you're James Blake & Company, who's the dickens is Jim?"

"I am not James Blake & Company," said John with a smile. "I am the Company. Jim has a substantial interest in the firm, and has done much towards its success."

"I'm mighty glad tew hear it," declared Sam, "but I reckon I can guess who does the thinkin'. Jim's a fine feller, but he allers was reckless an' careless, though maybe he's outgrown it. Where is he? Send fer him, John, an' we'll all talk it over together, like we did in the old days back in Rocky Woods."

John pressed a button and an attendant responded.

"If Mr. Blake is not busy, say that I should like to see him," he said.

"There's one thing you haven't told me about," said Sam, shifting his feet awkwardly. "I don't want tew pry into your private affairs, John, but have you seen her yet—I mean Miss Carden?"

The door opened softly and James Blake entered so silently that neither heard him.

"I have not seen Miss Carden," replied John. "She is not in the city."

"Yes she is," asserted Sam eagerly. "I saw her yesterday ridin' down Fifth avenue."

John Burt had seated himself at his desk, which he was putting in order. Surprised at Sam's positive statement he turned quickly. He saw Blake standing by the door. A shaft of sunlight fell full on his face. His hand was on the knob, and he stood motionless as if riveted to the floor. There was that in his expression and attitude which challenged John Burt's attention.

Students of psychological phenomena may offer an explanation of the impalpable impression received by John Burt at that moment. His was the dominating mind; Blake's the subjective. By that mysterious telepathy which mocks analysts and seers description a message passed to John Burt. He yet lacked the cipher to translate it. It dotted no definite warning and sounded none but a vague suspicion, but the vibration, though faint, was discordant.

John Burt glanced at Blake and turned to Sam.

"You surely are mistaken, Sam," he said. "Miss Carden is abroad and will not sail for New York for several days."

"Is that so?" Sam ran his fingers through his red hair and looked puzzled. "That's mighty curious! I've got an eye like a hawk, an' I'd a sworn it was her. I met her once or twice when she was here before, an' thought sure it was her I saw yesterday. Must be wrong, though. Guess I'd better begin wearin' glasses. So ye ain't seen her yet, John? I'll bet she'll be plumb glad tew meet you. We was talkin' about ye the last time I saw her. That's two years ago. She hadn't forgot ye, John."

CHAPTER XXIII.

Blake closed the door and Sam turned at the click of the latch.

"Why, here's Jim! Well, well, well! Here we are all together. Thought I wouldn't know John, didn't ye? I know him the moment he spoke, didn't I, John? And so old Rocky Woods has turned out the great firm of James Blake & Company! I want to congratulate both of ye. Are ye all through work? "Many thanks for your invitation, Sam, and I'd like to accept it, but it's hardly safe," said John. "In a few weeks I hope to enjoy your hospitality, and to extend mine, but until that time I am John Burt, and you don't know me. Sit down, Sam, we wish to discuss a business matter, or perhaps more accurately speaking, a political one. Jim, send one of the clerks out for a magnifying glass, and we'll drink Sam's health here. I'm still an exile, Sam. Until an hour ago Jim was the only man in New York who was acquainted with me. But I'm filing away prison bars, and you can help me, Sam."

"I can help you," echoed Sam. "You just call on me for anything except murder—an' I might manage that."

Blake had been singularly quiet, but he joined in the laugh which followed, and left the room to order the proposed refreshment.

"Jim ain't lookin' well," said Sam, sympathetically. "Looks sorta peaked like; don't you think so, John?"

"I noticed that this morning and told him so," John replied. "He has been under a severe strain for weeks, and possibly the change of climate doesn't agree with him. I'm going to send him into the country for a few days. He is entitled to a rest, and there's no reason why he shouldn't have it. Jim and I have been through many hard fought engagements together, but at last a decisive victory is in sight. Do you know Arthur Morris?"

Blake closed the door and Sam turned at the click of the latch.

"Why, here's Jim! Well, well, well! Here we are all together. Thought I wouldn't know John, didn't ye? I know him the moment he spoke, didn't I, John? And so old Rocky Woods has turned out the great firm of James Blake & Company! I want to congratulate both of ye. Are ye all through work? GEORGE M. WOOD.

I have given these two pictures of my hair before and after using Germ-Kin. My true statement is as follows: I have been bald for 7 years. In about 12 months Germ-Kin, grew my hair and relieved me of that itching dandruff.

K. P. DUNHAM.

Waukegan, Wis.

I make this sworn statement for the benefit of other people who are bald or getting bald. I have been bald for 13 years, and on the 14th of July one year ago I commenced using Germ-Kin. The picture without hair is a correct one of my hair, and the one with the hair on it is a correct one of my hair after using Germ-Kin. I did, and since have stopped the itching, cured the dandruff, and as to my hair, it is growing for itself. I shall never be without a head of hair. I noticed a new growth of hair.

Does your head itch? If so, this germ is lurking in your scalp. This germ you see here is 25,000 times its natural size. However, this is just as it looks under a powerful microscope. It can be found on any scalp that has dandruff. It destroys this germ and causes the hair to grow; besides curing any case of dandruff, stops hair falling out, and in short time, grows up in force bottles. We give no bottles, but will show for itself. Address all mail orders to The Germ-Kin Medicine Co., Milwaukee, Wis. For sale by all druggists.

Former Football Heroes

What Becomes of Gridiron Stars After They Leave College?—Some Have Become Physicians, Others Professional Coaches—Chadwick, McClave, Dale, Etc.

What becomes of famous football players after they leave college and start out to carve their own way in the world?

Do the qualities that made them heroes on the gridiron field stand them in stead in later years, balance their characters and contribute to success in business and professional life, or do they sink out of sight into mediocre careers?

The question of whether the training a college student receives on the football team is of any advantage to him in after life has often been discussed and variously answered. A year or so ago an attempt was made to arrive at a critical estimate of the advantage or disadvantage of football at Harvard to the after careers of Crimson players, but the only result was the general opinion that the game had not been played long enough to determine the matter, for football at American colleges is a comparatively recent sport.

David Dale.

In front of a cozy little office in one of the small towns of central Pennsylvania is a gift sign, modest enough in its way, which reads, "David Dale, M. D."

Yes, this means Dave Dale, the famous tackle of the University of Pennsylvania 1902 team. He is devoting himself to the useful and peaceful occupation of a physician and is reported ed to be building up a good practice. Those who know him are confident that he is employing the same thoughtful, analytical methods in his work that distinguished his play with the blue and red.

DAVID DALE, FORMER PRINCETON TACKLE.

John C. Teas.

John C. Teas of the University of Pennsylvania is also entitled to be called "doctor," and is practicing his profession in Philadelphia.

After leaving the university Teas entered a Philadelphia hospital, where he attempted to settle down to the work which was to yield his livelihood. Love for the game in which he had started clung to him, and last fall he was sought out by several semi-professional teams and asked to take part in their battles. He finally consented and played upon the All Syracuse eleven, without, however, giving up his hospital position. At the end of the season he announced that he was out of the game for good and took up the active practice of medicine.

Sol Metzger.

Sol Metzger, one of the most daring and dashing as well as one of the most popular players of Pennsylvania, is said to be coaching a football team in Texas. He held right end for four years and held it so well that no one else was ever able to beat him out for the position.

During the season of 1902 he played the game of his life and was considered a good candidate by many for the All American team. His admirers generally saw him smashing interference right and left, tackling with the determination of a lion and holding end runs in a manner to win renown for any player. On running back punts he was one of the best on the team. He did not do so well the next year, when he was captain, owing probably to the responsibilities of leadership.

Yale Veterans.

Members of Yale's 1902 team are busily preparing for the various professions and vocations they have selected. None has made a distinguishing mark in the world as yet, although all have high hopes of scoring an early goal.

Henry C. Holt, the careful, steady center, is studying law in New York; George B. Chadwick, halfback and quarterback, at the last accounts received by his friends in New Haven was teaching in a preparatory school in Indiana; Harvard G. Metcalf, halfback, has taken up the study of medicine, and his attention is closely held by the revelations of the dissecting room.

Ex-Captain Chadwick.

Chadwick is probably the best remembered of these men, as he was captain of the Blues in 1902. Under the system of Yale athletics the captain was practically supreme. His word was final in naming the men, in framing the style of play for the autumn campaign and in fighting the team's battles by ordering what plays he chose. Chadwick's style of attack was the McClung model, the line boring, wriggling, quick dodging and side stepping methods. He was one of the lightest backs on an eastern university eleven, but his four years' record was one of steady and at times brilliant play.

McCLAVE, PRINCETON FULLBACK, NOW BOWDOIN'S COACH.

Former Princeton Stars.

The majority of Princeton football stars enter business after graduation, either along mercantile, banking or insurance lines. Here and there one finds an isolated case of a star sandwiching professional coaching in his regular avocation, as in the case of H. McClave, fullback on the Princeton eleven in 1902, who is head coach at Bowdoin, but these cases are comparatively rare. McClave is by profession a civil engineer and is said to be doing well in that line. J. R. DeWitt, who has a large fortune in his own name, is soon to enter business in Chicago, while Hart, halfback on the 1902 team, is doing well in the insurance business in Cleveland, O.

Crimson stars of 1902 are widely scattered. Several are still at Harvard. H. Kernan, halfback, was one of this year's coaches, and others, among them Tackle Knowlton, are pegging away in the law school. Thomas H. Graydon, the famous fullback, is a successful shoe manufacturer in Cincinnati, while Putnam, halfback, is doing well as an architect in Boston.

Last year Graydon figured in a romance that added to his reputation for daring and won him an heiress for a bride.

Clark of Michigan.

"Get a divorce if you want to!" exclaimed the angry husband. "I can easily get another wife, and I've been on earth long enough to know that one woman is just as good as another, if not better."

"And I," coldly replied his better half, "have been on earth long enough to know that one man is just as bad as another, if not worse."

Waiting His Turn.

"Well, Jack," said his chum, after Jack had proposed to the most popular girl in town, "is it all right?"

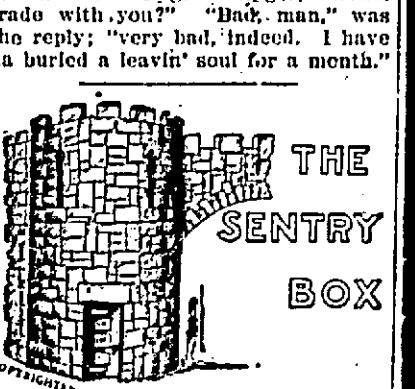

"Well," said Jack, ruefully, "I can hope—that's all."

"What did she say?"

"She said she'd file my proposal with all the others and consider it when she got down to it."

TARIFF ON LUXURY.

Proposed Increase on Various Articles.

The Sentry suggests a heavy increase in the tariff on certain articles of luxury and for the following reasons:

Suppose we as a people produce from our land certain things, for instance iron ore, wheat, corn, rye, oats, barley, timber from our forests, and leather from hides. Now we work these various things into articles of use—iron, steel, wood, leather, etc., etc., and make more articles than are required by our own people.

We send the excess to foreign lands and bring their money back to America to pay our millers, farmers, lumbermen and workmen in the factories.

Thus every dollar we get for such products is really a dollar produced, or, in other words, taken out of the land, and if we can keep this dollar and invest it in America it becomes a dollar of asset, so if we produce an excess of one hundred million dollars a year in some kind of product which is sent to Europe or other countries, and one hundred million returns to us to be invested in our own country, we add that much to the actual value of assets, and, therefore, to the riches of the country in which every citizen is an interested party.

Under the present arrangement the manufacturer who accumulates a profit, or the farmer who gets rich or the stockholder of the railroads who takes his proportion of the money for carrying wheat, ore, etc., and other Americans who earn an excess, go in large numbers to Europe carrying literally millions of American money, which they spend abroad.

Suppose, as an illustration, that we extract from European countries one hundred million dollars a year for our wheat, corn, manufactures, etc., and from that money the Americans—the so-called rich people—take twenty million dollars and carry it back to Europe. We then lose twenty millions of the one hundred millions which we have gained, and to that extent abstract from this country twenty millions a year. That twenty million dollars should be expended in America.

We, of course, cannot keep our people from travelling, but when they are rich enough to afford foreign travel they are rich enough to afford a tax on it which should go to the United States government, and to that extent reduce the taxes of poorer Americans.

New Fall and Winter Waists

"Newness" is the key-note of our splendid display of Ladies' Wool Waists—"Newness" in style, "newness" in variety, and "newness" in fabrics. Special attention is called to the exclusiveness of styles, materials and splendid workmanship.

We Start the Price at $1.50 Each.

At $2.00, $2.50, $3.00 and $3.50

We show extra values and a very large selection in Black, White and all the desirable shades and colorings. Wool waists you will have to have and we want you to know that this store is the place to buy them.

THERE are several thousand people in this vicinity who know that we are selling first-class Dry Goods very cheap. There are several thousand others that have not yet tried to find out about it. You heedless ones, you skeptical ones, you are the ones we want to interest.

WILL YOU MAKE A FAIR TEST?

You may find it quite interesting, and possibly profitable as well. This is the test we ask you to try and try it fairly: Make a list of a dozen staple Dry Goods items, something that you know is carried in all good dry goods stores; ascertain the price that other stores ask, then find out our prices on the same items. You can get at it any way you please. But however you get at it, be sure you go right to the bottom of the test and do it fair and right. We will beat them on four items out of five. We know it and you ought to know it.

BORT, BAILEY & CO.

For American women. Multiply this one case by many others, and it is not far away from a fair estimate to say that five to ten million dollars is spent by Americans in London, Paris and other foreign cities in the purchase of dresses, jewelry, stockings, pictures, automobiles and various and sundry things produced by foreign work people.

It should be the American policy to place the tariff so high on these things as to impel and practically force rich Americans to make their purchases in America, thus paying the money to American labor instead of foreigners.

Suppose we put the tariff so high on these things that the French work people will move to America. Would not that be an advantage?

For these reasons the Sentry, acting on behalf of the great majority of citizens who cannot afford to purchase such luxuries, will prepare a tariff bill greatly increasing the duties on such articles as the following:

Dresses and wearing apparel, decorated chinaware, precious stones, dress ornaments, embroideries, fans, artificial flowers, furs, jewelry, perfumes, ribbons and wines, and the other numerous articles that go to make for luxuries, rather than simple living.

It will be observed that all of these, with one or two exceptions, are articles of luxury which can be dispensed with in the common needs of life and are only purchased by the rich as luxuries.

The aim of the tariff bill will be to gather several millions of dollars a year from people who insist on spending their money in Europe for articles of luxury for which they should pay to the United States government a large tax to teach the people two things:

FIRST: That these articles should be made in America, and the expert makers should move to this country and become citizens, following their vocations here.

SECOND: That the people with money enough to afford such luxuries should be taxed heavily for indulgence in them.

This would naturally be followed by a more stringent examination by the custom house officers.

There is considerable complaint among rich people that the New York customs house is too rigid in examination; but the fact is that it is not rigid enough.

Doctors Say Drink More Schlitz

The body requires ten glasses of fluid per day. Most people drink too little to flush the body of its waste. The result is bad blood, nervousness, disease.

Then the doctor says "Drink More," and he knows this advice to be worth more than medicine.

That's one reason why pure beer is good for you. It leads you to drink more. And the beer is also a food and a tonic. But the beer must be pure. Schlitz beer is brewed in absolute cleanliness and cooled in filtered air. It is aged for months so it will not cause biliousness.

That's why doctors say "Schlitz." Ask for the Brewery Bottling.
